 2021 ALEATICO ROSÉ WINE
 SONOMA VALLEY • SONOMA COUNTY
 La Chertosa wines are “flavor-memories,” telling a story of wine styles from years past. This “Eye of the Swan™” is reminiscent of the wine my father, August, and I created over forty years ago.
 From the red Aleatico grape, this elegant red-soil-grown blush wine is dry, fruity, with tones of fresh peach and watermelon. Charming with frittata, fish, light fowl, and light dishes.
 My grandfather Samuele learned to make wine at the fourteenth century La Chertosa monastery near Lucca, Italy. We continue his monk inspired style in our winemaking today.
 Enjoy the glint in this Eye of the Swan™ – a twinkle that reflects our Italian family heritage, love for nature and a rich tradition in winemaking.
 ~ SAM J. SEBASTIANI, LA CHERTOSA WINES
 Old World Winemaker™
 Third Generation Winemaker

- In Italy there is a long history of wine making from Aleatico grapes. In fact, it is reported that during his exile, Napoleon said that Aleatico wines were his only consolation. “Eye of the Swan” is more than a bottle of wine. It serves as a tribute to one family’s effort to preserve age-old techniques of winemaking. This new Eye of the Swan is very personal for me. It reminds me of spending time with my father, learning about waterfowl and winemaking. Those are happy memories that have served me all my life.
  - The extremely rare red Aleatico grapes were grown in the legendary Serres Family Vineyards in Sonoma Valley. The relationship between the Serres and Sebastiani families dates back to our grandfathers and the early days of wine production in the Sonoma Valley. Both men were experienced growers with a passion for quality and were responsible for decades of fine vintages.
  - This wine is a tribute to one family’s effort to preserve, for future generations, both the age-old techniques of winemaking, but also the contribution to preserving the abundance of waterfowl so necessary to keeping our environment enriched.
  - Dry and full-bodied, rich and full of fruit, versatility has been the secret of success. So if you enjoy wine, red or white, we invite you to include “Eye of the Swan” when planning your next meal, event or activity. You will find it to be the ideal complement to any food you serve.
